ELA asks Calif. Supreme Court to review Davis v. Fresno USD Appellate decision creates confusion regarding lease-leaseback contracts and conflict of interest law

This week CSBA's Education Legal Alliance asked the California Supreme Court to accept a Petition for Review filed by the Fresno Unified School District in Davis v. Fresno USD. In a letter to the Court, the ELA requests review because "this matter is 'necessary to secure uniformity of decision' and 'to settle an important question of law.'" The appellate court struck down a lease-leaseback school construction contract and found that the conflict of interest provision in Government Code section 1090 applied to the corporate contractor. The decision has caused significant confusion and uncertainty regarding lease-leaseback contracts and the applicability of section 1090. The result is that many facility projects have been put on hold, cancelled, or scaled back — harming students, districts and COEs, and taxpayers. Similarly, given the serious criminal and civil consequences associated with violating section 1090, districts and county offices of education need clear guidance from the Supreme Court as to its scope. For more on this case, please read the latest Legal Insights column on page 11 of the summer 2015 issue of CSBA's California Schools magazine, available online.

Small districts can now have smaller boards

New law allows for flexibility

A new law allows small school districts in California to reduce the size of their school boards. Districts with less than 300 average daily attendance the prior year can now have three board members instead of five. If ADA rises above 300, small districts may increase board size from three members to five. Authored by Assembly Member Marc Levine, AB 331 is particularly aimed at rural and small districts that often have difficulty finding five school board members. Previously, those districts had to fill all vacant seats, costing districts time and money. Currently, there are approximately 225 school districts statewide with 300 ADA or less.
